FOR-

PEOPLE.

A London tailor's dictum was that he could take a meal sack and make a suit of clothes worthy of a gentleman's wearing if the fit was right.

Gentlemen have fancles in dressing.

One goes for something showy, another expressly calls for a special weave, and so on. But the particular points of a suit are fit and style. Material and making may be ever so good, but condemnation will be swift if there be fallure in fit and style.

In these two points our stock of suits for business and every-day wear fulfills the highest ideals of dress; with due attention given to propriety of fabrics and perfectness of making, and, above all, with the wit of the clothier-his handiwork-shining at its brightest, in the tone of fashion reigning in them, impalpably, distinctly stamping them as stylish and faultless in fit. We extol these less highly than a gentleman would in ex-made, and at prices of ready-made.

You'll be likely to think them above the average of custom work when you

- The Cooling Off Process. During the first six months of his may ried life his wife always watched for him and tripped down the street half a block and tripped down the street half a block to meet him when he left the car; for three months more she met him at the gate; then for six months she opened the front door for him, and I know always kissed him when he came: n. Last week I went home with him for dinner, and we found her reading a novel in the library. I don't believe she would have left her chair if he had been alone. Does he care? Bless you, no! He has cooled off, too, and yet they get along well and I don't think have yet had any serious quarrels. They give good dinners, too.—
